MICHAEL STROGOFF.

Presentation of Jules Verne's Great Realistic Drama at the Garland East Evening

Only a medium sized audience assembled at the Garland to witness Michael Strogoff, by Charles L. Andrews' Minnetta Carnival Company. The scene of the play is laid in Siberia, during the time of the invasion by the Tartars, and the presentation last evening was decidedly realistic. Some magnificent jugglery was introduced by variation, as also what those who enjoy such things would term a "ballet divertissement." The ballets were, however, conspicuously absent. The scenery employed by the company was its own property, and was fully up to all the requirements of the piece. Harold Linson as Michael Strogoff was only fair, having physique and voice, but falling short in pronunciation and articulation. Miss Helen Jones as Maria, Strogoff's mother, gave great strength to the piece by her excellent acting. Grown-go Mohawk played the part of the revengeful gypsy to perfection, while Florine Arnold's Nadia could hardly have been excelled. Ralston's Ivan was good, but the two newspaper correspondents, Cornelius O'Brien and Philip Philpot, made the hits of the evening with the odds in favor of the decidedly English Philpot. Taken together the performance was a fine one and merited a much more decided recognition at the hands of the theatre goers of Waco.

Stockholders Meeting

St. Louis, Oct. 20.—The stockholders of the St. Louis, Arkansas and Texas road met here today and voted on the proposition to extend the 2 percent first mortgage now on the road over the branch lines. The first mortgage is for $1,000,000 a mile. Under the terms the company was authorized to extend the mortgage at the rate of $3,000,000 a mile over all branch lines as built or required. The company has built a line from Altheim to Little Rock, and from Louisville, Ark., to Shreveport, 120 miles in all. The proposition voted on today was to add $1,000,000 to the indebtedness of the company to be included in first mortgage, and receive 120 miles of new road. The proposition was adopted, all the stock represented voting for it. There were only 350 shares not represented.

ON THE DIAMOND.

The Athletics, of Austin, and the Favorite Red Stockings, of Waco, Compete.

The Game Close for the First Three Innings. Then One-sided 'Till the Eighth. Then a Clean Walk-over.

Yesterday afternoon, at the appointed time, as previously announced in this paper, the Athletics, of Austin, and the Red Stockings, of this city, presented themselves on the diamond at the Driving Park, both teams being handsomely uniformed and thoroughly equipped for ball playing. The evening was cool and pleasant, and all the players were well fitted thereby. Bertheud was absent from the grounds, being unable to play on account of illness. This put the Red Stockings to a disadvantage, from the fact that Bertheud is considered a great money first base. Crawford, however, held it down pretty well, considering this being his first experience with the Waco team. Burch was to be found in center field, and took in all the flys that came in his territory. Hehl and Ker, the battery, did fine work, and kept up their reputation to the end.

THE GAME.

The Austin team went to the bat first, and undoubtedly disappointed with what they had to contend with, for it lasted only long enough for the third man to present himself, and retire without making a base. The Reds then followed and were shut out as easily as were their opponents. The second inning resulted the same as the first for the Austin team, while the Red Stockings closed with 2 runs—made by Rose and Barnard. The close of the third inning put both clubs on an equal footing, the score being 2 to 2. The fourth inning was played and resulted in a whitewash all round. The Austin team commenced gaining on the fifth inning, making three runs while Waco stood pat on her first score. On the sixth inning the Athletics again increased their score, and so on until the seventh and half of the eighth, when the game stood, Austin 11; Waco, 2, leaving the last half for Waco. Here is where the revolution took place. Hehl went to the plate on the eighth inning, and knocked the bat at his own discretion. He was followed by Burch, then Crawford, all of them making runs and so on through the list until seven runs had been scored. This left the game at the close of the eighth inning, even, Athletics, 11; Red Stockings, 9. The Austin team then went to the bat for their last time, and closed it with an increase of one score. Then through loud cheering, the Reds re-entered to close the contest, and right here is where it closed. Hehl was at the bat, and five balls were called, which gave him his base, and was so ordered by the umpire. Hehl took first, when the dispute arose. It was for some time that the discussion lasted, necessarily detaining the game, the umpire's looking to his previous decision. When time was called to proceed with the game the Athletics failed to show up, when the umpire, after the time had expired, according to Spaulding of 1887, page 114, section 3, rule 41 declared the game in favor of the the score being 9 to 0.
